

Challenges faced by IELTS Aspirants

When compared to other standardized tests, IELTS (International English Language Testing System) is preferred by non-native English speakers all over the world. While there are a large number of students who appear for TOEFL and other similar tests, IELTS has the upper hand. Accordingly, all IELTS Classes in Delhi have observed a massive incline for IELTS exams.

What are the challenges faced by a non-native speaker of English?

Accent

There are different accents and all of them play a unique role in having a relationship with our identities. Moreover, it conveys people our language, location, and community. This is one of the primary reasons why there's a huge difference in our accent when we relocate to a new area. More often than not, the subtle changes in the accent are unnoticeable by our mind. However, others who have known us for quite some time can spot this change.

Interestingly, studies have shown that voice-controlled assistants would wrongly interpret when different people spoke. American accents were sometimes misinterpreted. Even other accents have led to astounding reconstructions of speech. IELTS Coaching in Delhi vastly involves the understanding of different accents and increases the potential of their candidates to crack the IELTS exam.

Pronunciation

While many people confuse 'pronunciation' with 'accent', they're not the same. An accent is a stress that you place on a syllable. Pronunciation is the technique of saying a word. In other words, the accent is a deviation in pronunciation. We all know that this varies from place to place. It's not the pronunciation that identifies a person's origins, but it's the accent. The types of accents largely outweigh the types of pronunciation. IELTS Institute in Delhi, like Moveabroad™, helps you in strengthening your pronunciation skills.

Spelling

We all know the difficulties that a non-native speaker of English faces in spelling certain words. Textbook knowledge is what we all have gained throughout our lives. Whatever has been taught is strongly imprinted in our memories. It's difficult to understand how easily the spelling changes from one place to another. For example, the word 'humour' in British English becomes 'humor' in American English. Now imagine the dilemma faced by a student who intends to appear in multiple English proficiency tests like IELTS.

Spelling mistakes are unappealing and while it's not a mistake in a true sense, it doesn't abide by the local spell checks either. IELTS Classes in Delhi, like Moveabroad™, makes sure that students have a thorough knowledge of the differences in spellings across the English language.

Lack of practice

It's uncommon for a non-native speaker to speak English fluently. A serious lack of practice can make or break the ambitions of an aspirant. Therefore, IELTS Training in Delhi includes a determined and practical approach towards English speaking. It's not practice that makes a man perfect, rather it is the continuous practice that counts at the end.
